Believe It If You Need It

''WELCOME TO HAVANNA," SAID THE PILOT

There I was stepping off the Metroliner, making my way through the crumbling parthenon of Union Station in Washington, D.C. towards daylight. And there I stood, jaw on the floor, an almost spiritual rush ascending my spine. I didn't know if I was in love or totally repulsed by the gleaming white structure which greeted me. That building I had often seen on postcards and posters, in magazines and in god-only-knows how many textbooks. books.

My emotions were soon to be shattered. Hailing a cab in the swarming traffic, I was on my way up the then unfamiliar Massachusetts Avenue amid a sea of cars and busses, crashing and honking, and masses of wooden pilings from Metro construction. The harsh city noises ended my reverie abruptly. Long blocks of government office buildings and commercial department stores barely let me glimpse the top of the Washington Monument. The cab crawled slowly through two tunnels and advanced on one of the Captial City's famous (infamous?) traffic circles that seems to represent the city itself. Then, almost as suddenly as they erupted, things quieted down. Almost hushed. This was embassy row. Over a bridge and flashes of Rock Creek Park. Past a statue of Winston Churchill (maybe that V really did stand for peace once). So many sights I can't absorb them all. Then up a hill, down one and up another with the cabbie's foot glued to the floor. Madly around yet another crazy circle which ends in a screeching halt. No accident, amazingly, this must be it. "That will be five bucks." I gave the guy six and told him to keep it, grabbed my suitcase and jumped out. There I stood, starry-eyed, somehow I felt I had been here before.

"As You Like It" Outdoors

The New Shakespeare Company of San Francisco gave a surprise performance in early September. Lucky passers-by happened upon the performers in full makeup and costume in Woods-Brown amphitheatre. Residents of Leonard and McDowell were treated to an afternoon showing of the Company's repertory. "As You Like It", a light-hearted comedy combining Shakespeare's favorite comic elements of mistaken identity and impersonation, contains some of his best poetry. Good will and friendship prevail over masquerading in the end and there is a huge wedding party where everyone amends their differences, of course.

A nice way to spend a warm afternoon in Washington without leaving campus without feeling guilty about not doing work. Especially good when your Reading and Composition professor offers you your choice of plays for the paper on early English literature due before you go home for Thanksgiving

"You Know And I Know"

The first taste of Washington entertainment for new AU students was the orientation concert in Woods-Brown.

The outside amphitheatre, usually a place of serenity, was ignited by the frenetic atmosphere created by rock artist Dave Mason.

As the evening cooled and the crowd warmed to Mason's familiar tune, "You Know and I Know."The concert brought people together for a time and hopefully founded some new friendships for the year.

McGovern: A Trace Of Greatness

A few years back he had seemed so right. A different sort of man, a man unafraid to speak of feelings for his fellow man who were dying in an unnecessary war or suffering in isolated, degrading reservations and urban ghettos. So after another Kennedy came and went he began to try on his own. It was hard at first, but he had beliefs that turned into convictions. Supporters joined him and with them came enthusiasm. We had a man who really cared—finally. The momentum of support increased with steady intensity and the promise of the Presidency seemed attainable.

But then came Eagleton and "1000 per cent". Beliefs were compromised for politically feasible reasons and his chances faded along with his image of honest sincerity. November came and he went. But the enthusiasm he caused seemed to hold the promise of continuation.

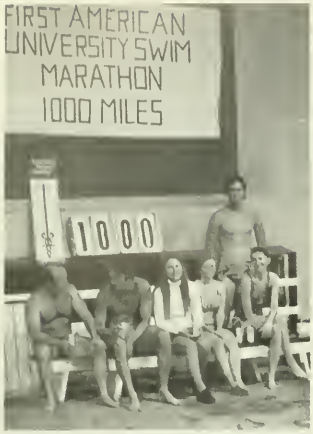
One year later the crowds remembered. But his smile was weak and the enthusiasm was only a phantom image of days gone by. He spoke of present problems and what should be. Some of us doubted if things really would have been that different. But we still clapped at the end, applauding our own dead dreams.

Racism In A Day

Ever since the spring of 1971, when Mayday spent the last of the positive energy, Au has wallowed in apathy. There were incidents during the 1971/2 school year when massive amounts of negative energy in the form of racism grippedthe campus. The Morton administration put OASATAU on "trial" for the supposed misuse of Student Association funds. The rest of the year only heightened the tension between some Blacks and whites on campus. It was during the budget sessions of the newly formed Student Confederation that most representatives noticed the absense of the Black Student Unions request for funds and their physical absence at the meeting.

OASATAU was systematically broken up by the Morton administration and then effectively put back together by some hard working people. Racial tension still existed and nothing was being done to bridge the gap between Blacks and whites on campus. In October, a group of students and professors and some radical political economists at AU proposed and implemented a teach-in on racism. The event was spurred by the controversial lectures of Dr. Silverberg of the psychology department which purportedly endorsed the theories of such avowed racists as Jensen and Schockley.

The consensus of the panel was that those preaching racial inferiority were trying to maintain a system that oppresses others for capitalistic motives. Economics professor Howard Wachtel suggested that AU places an oppressive burden on the local Black population of Washington merely by existing were it does. However, it was the first sign that AU might be awakening from it's long hibernation in the "Country Club District" of Washington.



Swim Marathon: The first annual swim marathon for cancer research failed to raise the expected amount of money, despite the help of TV personality Willard Scott and Washington Redskins team members.

KPU Hosts A Variety Of Guests

Dick Tuck, political trickster: "I bumped into Bob Haldeman this summer and he accused me of starting all this. I told him he may be right, but he's the one who ran it into the ground."

Robert Myers, publisher of the New Republic

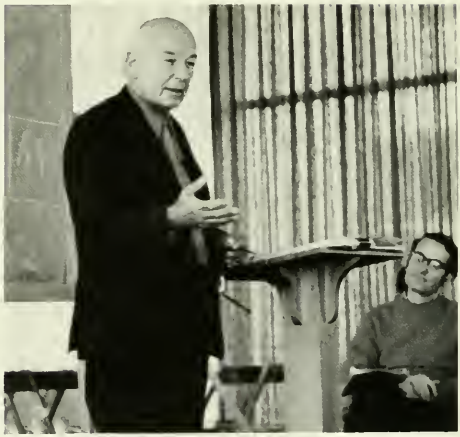
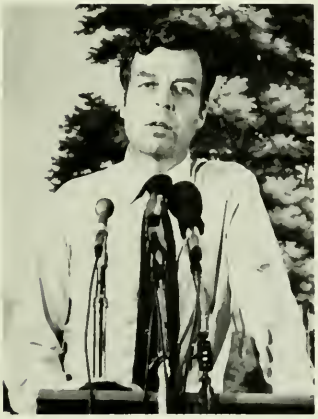
Brit Hume, former investigative reporter with Jack Anderson



Lord Balough spoke on the economic situation in a historical concert to students in Hughes-McDowell Lounge. Even economics department chairman Jim Weaver attended and listened with interest .

Lawton Chiles, democratic senator from Florida: "The presidency has become so powerful that it has come to view itself as above the law, above the courts and above the legislative process."



Peter Flanigan, head of Nixon's Council on Economic Policy and assistant to the President on international trade: "When this administration came into power, we found that our posture in international economics was based on the same misconceptions of reality that existed in our international political and security structure."

Elizabeth Holtzman, democratic representative from Brooklyn: "Nixon, in his brooding solitude, must feel that his own best impulses have been short-circuited by the ingratitude of a nation of children."

Eric Redman, Harvard law student and author: "I could not be an elected official because I am not willing to eat the 15 foods on the campaign trail, attend the long, boring dinners, or dish out false flattery and phony press releases."

America At American

Campus was invaded by suburban high school students on a sunny afternoon in October for the America concert. Accompanied by Ian Matthews, the concert started promptly and ended before sunset.

Woods-Brown overflowed as far back as the entrance to Clendenen but many AU students were annoyed by the predominantly young teens who filtered onto campus despite security measures.

Afternoon concerts avoid hassles from AU's nearby neighbors and the amphitheatre is an ideal place to enjoy outdoor events with everyone benefiting from the mild weather, including the Good Humor man who always seems to run out of just what you want by the time you work your way to his window.

Trying to sneak out of the Friday afternoon staff meeting to catch up on some sleep, the news editor hands me a list of stories for the week. An interview, cover a speaker in New Lecture Hall, investigate a rumor that the showers on fourth floor Leonard were painted purple by an unknown artist,and assorted others.

Wasting most of the weekend in an effort to relax and procrastinate doing a term paper due last week, I get up Monday morning with a resolution not to get further behind this week. But the professor isn't in his office for the interview, the speaker arrives an hour late and when I got around to heading over in the direction of Leonard a dorm war was in progress. Barely escaping a shower of rotten eggs, tomatoes, and flaming toilet paper, I retreated to my room and attempted some writing before falling asleep which amounted to about five words.

Four phone calls and two office visits later I got the interview and made my way up to the third floor of MGC for an early start on deadline night. Typing, editing, rewriting and I'm finished but it's only 1:00 a.m. so I volunteer another hour which turns out to be three.

Wednesday night and I'm finally sitting down to do the paper when a frantic phone call pleads with me to come up and "just write a few headlines". Layout time rolls around and the managing editor needs six inches of copy and the photographs for my story didn't print very well so it's back to the typewriter.

Another late night so I skip my morning class, determined to do some class work, after all. I am paying tuition to go to school here. Thursday night paper is put to bed and the four or five people that do that usually don't get there. Too many free unclassifieds, not enough photographs, spelling mistakes plague them until the early morning hours.

Friday morning the Eagle appears in MGC.s lobby and all over campus I hear grumblings about the free unclassified that wasn't in and the photograph with the dust on it. But I wonder if anyone really reads the paper. Back upstairs at 4:00 for the critique and another week begins for the newspaper. And I get further behind. Will my parents believe me when I tell them a grade of "I" means Incredible?

A Classy Reunion

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times," there was Bowser, Bobby Knudson's ax, Mohammad and his brother and endless electric punch parties. There was the dirt, the roaches, a bat on the third floor, broken into soda and candy machines and, every Friday, the maids. It was the strongest political block at American University and remains so today.

The freshman class president student senator were residents of "the Cock". From September 1970 on, every time a veteran of Hancock hall appeared on a ballot at A.U. he had an automatic block of close to 75 votes as a gesture from his fellow residents. No other group could ever match that advantage or that kind of turn out. Today veterans of McLean Gardens still sit on the courts, work on the publications and serve on various university committees.

Now "the Cock" is slated to be torn down with the rest of McLean Gardens as part of the Friendship Heights renewal project but it bears the mark of the guys who suffered together in those hallowed halls. A Mayday sticker still greets one at the door. Our old posters hang on the walls. And in the room of Jerry Snyder and Kenny Rabin, on the first floor, an overhang still reads "It was a very good year."

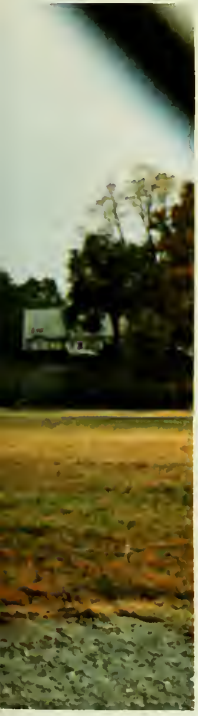
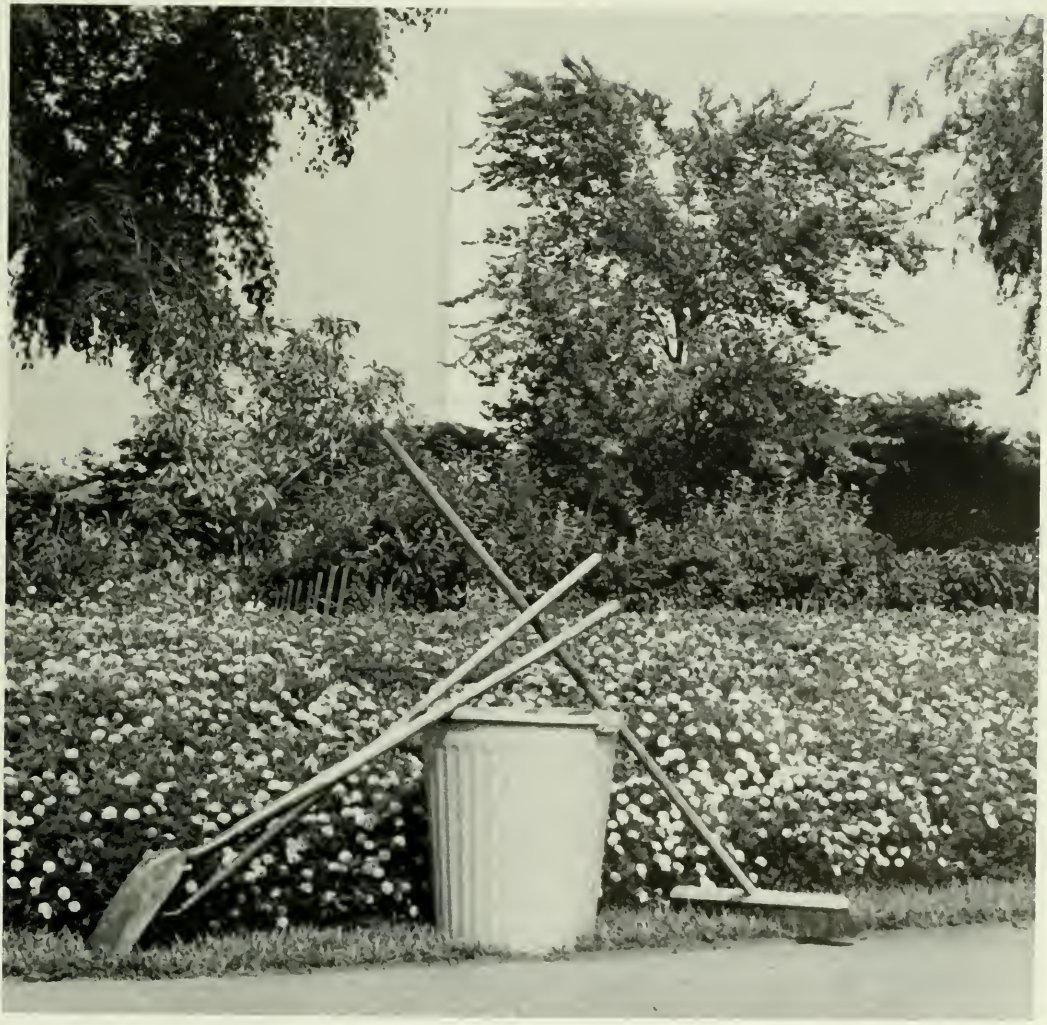
The cross country team closed the 1973 with a dual meet record of 7-0. This marked their best record ever and only the second time they've been undefeated (6-0 in 1960).

Gary Cohen and Dave Reinhart placed 1-3 in the MACs but due to injuries, AU only finished third in the conference.

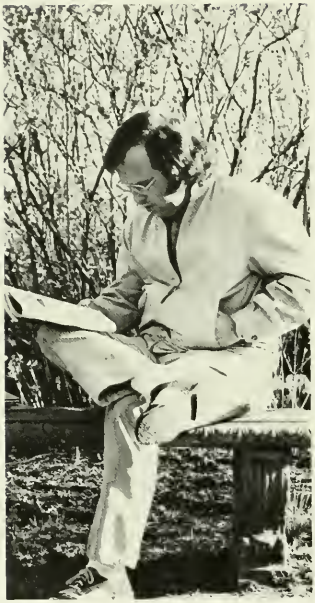
Gary Cohen went on to finish 66th in the nationals after a disappointing 25th in the IC4A's. Reinhart was the best area runner in the IC4A's finishing 10th, and finished 162nd in the NCAAs.



NIXON



I don't feel like I live in a city. There's too much country in nearby Maryland and Virginia to feel the constrictions of a city. Assateague Island, the Eastern Shore, and Shenandoah National Park are easily in driving distance, even if you can only go for the day. For a quick escape, the National Zoo is fifteen minutes from campus and you can drive through Rock Creek Park to get there. The Park makes driving across town almost enjoyable. Indian summer lasted until November this year which made my first two months in Washington the best I can remember. Walking around Washington Cathedral's gardens or finding a remote hiding place behind campus in Wesley or going monument hopping after the tourists had gone home was never as relaxing. Maybe I never had so many things I wanted to relax from.



Walking across campus, you dodge the mud and the pipes to get to class. If you're lucky you can stop and talk to a friend on the way. Sitting on the quad waiting for a frisbee to fly your way you can open a book but the sun gets warm on your back and the sky's so blue you have to look up.

People hanging on the steps of Mary Graydon and on the curb tempt you to skip the class, the studying, or going home. After all, how many more nice days are there going to be? Fooled again, Washington weather keeps you from getting into classes and you fall behind.

"I'll catch up over vacation." But Thanksgiving comes and goes and home was so chaotic that nothing got done. Midterms are over but papers are due and finals are just around the corner. Off to the library, then on to Georgetown's to get the research done. Christmas is coming, it's the end of the semester and you hope you can make up the incomplete over the break.

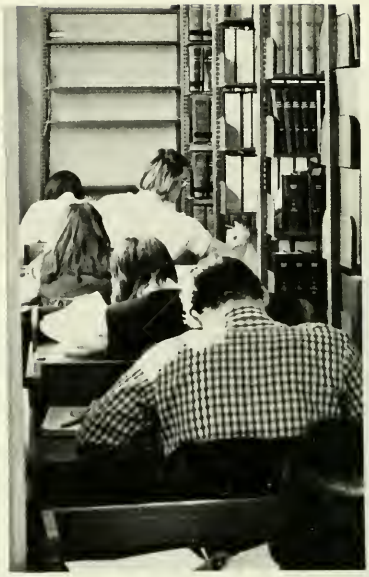
Working With What You Have

And Hoping For More



Overcrowded, underlit, and containing less than one third of the volumes required to adequately serve the University community, the AU library is in the process of finding a new home. Until it does students will have to persevere. Apparantly this will be a hard task since inspite of all the library's inadequacies it's use has increased by more than twenty percent. University Librarian Donald Dennis uses this statistic and others illustrating the present facility's unsuitability in his campaign for the construction of a new learning center.

A campaign to build a library is only one step the university has taken in it's efforts to alleviate the crisis. Computerization of circulation and automation of library stacks are two more. But the university is working with a structure that was not meant to be a library and this can be seen in the fact that the building is not structurally sound enough to permit the shelving of more materials on its upper floor.

The University has tried to gear up a fund raising effort. Something it was supposedly doing when President Williams came here and announced his 54 million dollar plan. That was soon cancelled and the more realistic 10 million dollar library effort was announced. After trying unsuccessfully to raise it in a low key manner, the university put together a fund raising bureaucracy that only rivals its administrative structure. Many doubt that the money can be raised at all let alone in time for those who are now freshman to see it before they graduate.

The pleas, dinners and magazine ads continue, while the campus is being torn up in an effort to relocate utility lines for the new structure, and students trek to Georgetown, George Washington and to the Library of Congress to get their work done.

Frank Creveti took command of The American University Club Football team in 1971. Now, two years later a task of building an effective team has been complete(d). The Eagles finished their regular season with an undefeated 5-0-1, ranked ninth in the nation, and made their first appearance in a bowl game.

The Eagles offense was built on the passing of Tase Ellinger and the running of Cliff Jenks. Ellinger had 916 yards completed in the air with a 46.3 passing precentage. Jenks averaged over 90 yards a game for the Eagles. The offensive line was anchored by 310 pound All-American Donald Brawner. Leading the Eagles defense was 185 pound middle linebacker Jimmy Embersits, a product of Pittsburgh who averaged eight unassisted tackles per contest this year. The kicking game featured Doug Woodbury, whose punting style has averaged 40 yards in 1973.

To top off the season, on Nov. 9, the AU Eagles received and accepted a bid from the NCSA to go to the Empire Bowl vs. Oswego State College in Oswego, N.Y. to compete for the Eastern Club Football Championship. AU went to Oswego Nov. 17, and played a tough, hard-fought game, but fell to an aggressive and determined Oswego State.

In the semi-finals the Rabbi's defeated the Potato Kings 7-6 and PSK fell to GABA Gentiles 9-0. In the finals Rabbi's rolled to a 13-0 win. The Rabbi's represented AU in the extra-mural tournament at Mongomery College and lost to Prince Georges Community College.

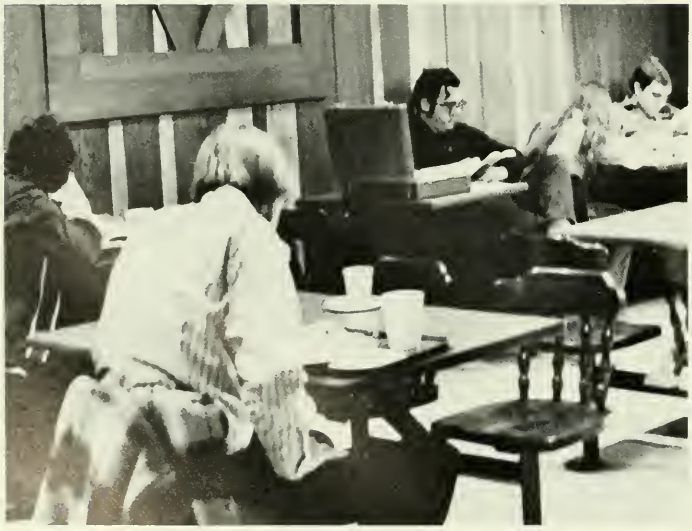
The SC concert committee sought an alternative to huge rock concerts on the baseball field this fall. They succeeded by hosting soul artists, The Persuasions, and The James Cotton Blues Band in Leonard Center. Entertaining a previously ignored segment of the student body, the two groups played to a small audience seated on the floor and bleachers in the gym. In contrast to previous concerts, non-AU students were not allowed and the budget was kept to a minimum; but enjoyment by those attending remained high.

I've wondered sometimes if it was all worth it. The long hours spent in the library looking for books that weren't there, the treks downtown to mumble my way through term paper interviews.

The early morning hours spent chain-smoking and staring at a blank piece of paper wondering why my hand and mind couldn't work at the same time. Sometimes I thought it was pure and simple masochism which drove me to postpone writing papers until the night before.

After an all-nighter, I was sure it was. As I sat time after time in a class trying to keep my bleary eyes from fuzzing in and out of focus, I swore I would never do it again. But, of course, I did. I came to believe that although my study habits were patterned by laziness, they also reflected a desire to maintain a sense of my humanity.

So to prove that life was more than just grinding out term papers and cramming my head full of miscellaneous information, I took the time to go out to dinner with friends, take that walk, and to watch that insipid television show everybody has said was so good.

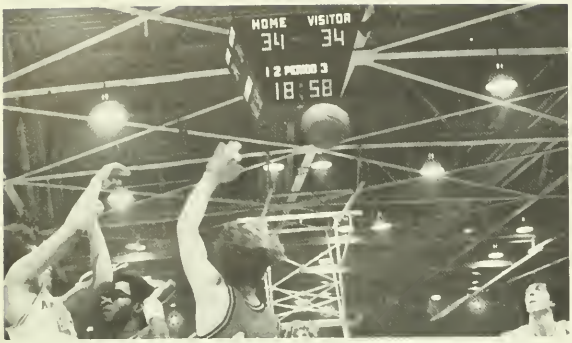


Behind The Counter

ARA Slater food services were a frequent topic of conversation of students and professors alike. Numerous letters in the Eagle reflected the discontent with Slater's on-campus operations. ARA managers received letters voicing complaints about quality, prices and hours of operation.

Employee relations fell to a new low, absenteesim rose to a new high. Student employees talked of initiating a strike because of working conditions. To top all this Slater had to contend with a meat shortage, a food shortage and an employee shortage, not to mention the Health department which threatened to close all Slater operated dining services at AU.

And as if that wasn't enough for the food service management to put up with, the University put the food service contract under the auspices of the Contract Review Board, thus giving students a voice in who they want to be served by when the food service contract comes up for renegoitation this fall.



The major question surrounding this years basketball team had to be "What can the team do without Kermit Washington?" It was shown in the opening game that the team was ready with a hard fought 69-68 come-from-behind victory against Catholic University. In this game the Eagles scored 11 straight points in the final 2 minutes and 41 seconds to gain the final lead. A missed foul shot by C.U. then clinched the victory. Johnny Lloyd lead the scoring with 23 points with 7 coming in the last 3 minutes.

WAMU, 610 on your AM dial, proved once more that it is much more than just a radio station. Although the annual marathon was cut by two days this year, it still managed to raise more money than in previous years. The money, $3,850.00, will go to D.C. Children's Hospital. D.C. Children's is one of the few hospital in the country that will not turn away any patient, no matter how poor he might be. The only stipulation is that the patients must not be over 18 years of age. The hospital exists on private donations and a small HEW subsidy that has been cut each year since Richard Nixon took office. This has made the efforts of WAMU even more important to the survival of the Hospital.

Under the directorship of Norma Goldberg, WAMU staff solicited goods and services from area businesses which were then auctioned off to the university community from December 2 through December 7. This year, aside from the usual records, movie tickets, and, of course, beer, Duke Ziebert's donated a cake. ARA gave the marathon staff food and drinks via the 97 Carryout and once again the people at Koon's Ford provided the trailer that makes the whole show possible. Despite mild grumbling over the continual harassment by marathon staffers and friends in order to solicit contributions, most AU students went back to their dorms feeling proud that they had made a contribution to a very worthwhile cause.

The AU community as a whole can be proud of making a sizable donation to and recognizing their role as a member of the District of Columbia community.

RULES

OBJECT OF THE GAME: The object of this game is to graduate. That is done by amassing 32 credits.

PLAY: The game is started by distributing $1,000 to each player. After this each player rolls the dice. The highest number plays first. The dice are then passed to the left to continue play. Each player continues around the board in an orderly manner as dictated by the roll of the dice and/or the directions of the cards. When a player lands on a square the directions of the square must be followed. If it demands an established rent, this rent must be paid to the university. If a person is to receive a course credit shall be added to that players score. If the player is directed to lose a turn, the dice shall pass that player and go to the next person to the left the following time around. If a person is to lose a course credit one must be subtracted from said players score. There are only two exceptions. If a person lands on a square as a result of the directions on a card, the directions on the card shall take precedence. For example, if a person is directed to a restaurant the amount specified on the card shall be paid, if no amount is specified the amount shown of the board shall be levied against that person. Second, if a person is directed to loose a credit and he has none, or more than possessed, that player does not owe the board a credit. One can never acheive a negative credit rating.

When one passes go the bank/ university shall imburse that player $300 and 4 credits.

REGISTRAR'S OFFICE: Upon landing on the registrars office one may purchase 1 course credit for the amount on the dice times ten. Example—a player on Anderson rolling a four would find his piece on the registrars office square. That person has the option to buy one credit and only one credit for $40. One is not obligated to buy. If a person is sent to the registrar's office square a credit may be purchased for 10× the amount shown on the roll that placed the piece on the Chance or Counseling Center square. Again the player has the option to buy a credit. There is no obligation.

DISPENSARY: One is just visiting when landing on the square marked Dispensary. However if a player is sent there, three rolls of the dice must take place before one can continue to move. This is the only way out of the dispensary.

LIBRARY: The library square is much the same as the Registrars Office square. Upon landing on this square the player must pay ten times the amount shown on dice as a library fine. This money is turned over to the bank/university. As with the Registrar's office cards take precedence and directions on the cards must be followed. If there is a contradiction the cards must be followed.

WINNING: One wins when 32 credits are compiled. One can lose before a person involved wins if a player ends up in the red in terms of money. If one is forced into debt that players piece shall be retired from the board.

If after reading these directions and looking at the board one finds a striking similarity between AUopoly and another game, please keep in mind the following. One can not buy any property on the board. The amount of money accumulate does not play into who wins and who loses at the end of the game. This is determined by credits alone. Of course, one can not end up in the red. Theortically no square discriminates against any player for reasons of race, creed, religion, or sex or any other reason. A person may not buy their way out of the dispensary or any other jam. Mom and Dad are not a phone call away anymore.

Four years ago AU had over a dozen concerts a year. Small groups in Leonard Center Gym or, if weather was good, outside at Woods-Brown. Simple shows without much fanfare or much expense.

The student senate voted to have fewer concerts with big name groups the next year and up went concert costs. Scaffoldings, tents, added security guards all add to the expense of a show.

Big name groups like the Grateful Dead and Chicago brought large crowds from outside the university. The baseball field was utilized to handle the crowd that was sure to overflow Woods-Brown. More security, outdoor toilets, health services to accomodate the crowds turned concert expenses into a fiasco.

Not Exactly A Revolution

The pulse of sirens, distant trains, the throbbing echo of some unseen horn, muted conversations that forewarn of journeys, passing strangers, doom or joy; all the portent once revealed by gypsies as they read the whispers in your hand.
It seemed a time when one by one the stars were blinking out—and men at last had time to doubt whatever anxious passion made them build a thing from which they had to run.

You hear, but all the same you turned away. . .

Kay's Spiritual Enlightenment

Among the many distinctions that surround the American University campus, there is one building which stands out from the rest, the Abraham S. Kay Spiritual Life Center. It is a place to study, relax, or just sit and ponder the next hour's class; or a place to come and talk over things with a person who cares. In fact, it is the only Ecumenical Center in the Washington, D.C. College Community. Here, practically all faiths are harbored under one roof, with the staff representing eleven.

Under the coordination of Joe Rainey, United Methodist Chaplain, the center is open for a wide variety of activities which assist students in their years at American. The other chaplains and advisors are Lee McGee; Earl Brill, Episcopal; Paul Economides, Eastern Orthodox; Paul Liston, Roman Catholic; Tom Luce, Presbyterian; R. Bruce Poynter, University Chaplain; Howard Rees, Baptist Student Advisor; Walter Scarvie, Lutheran; Gordon Smith, Christian Science Advisor; and Harold White, Jewish.

The general activities range from particular services of each religion, to retreats and coffee hours.

For individual services, Kay offers regularly scheduled Catholic Masses daily and weekends, Protestant services on Sunday, Christian Science services on Tuesday, and Jewish services on Friday and Jewish holidays. Also for Jewish students full kosher style dinners are provided on Friday evenings with plans for their own kosher kitchen in the near future.

Another feature of the Kay Center is the draft and vocational guidance center which serves a dual role in these two strategic areas. The center also has a veteran's center to serve returning veterans. Anyone who has received the benefits of the services it offers knows the rewards Conservative Sen. Buckley made headlines in March by declaring himself in favor of the impeachment of President Nixon.

HOTLINE is a confidential telephone service operating from noon to 4 a.m. daily, designed to help A.U. students with problems.

The staff consits of 60 student volunteers, all carefully screened and trained to assist any caller on such topics as drugs, pregnancy, home or roomate problems, or simply, to be available for talk to break up a lonely stretch of time.

HOTLINE also keeps a complete referral list to guide a caller to the right professional agency when such services are needed.

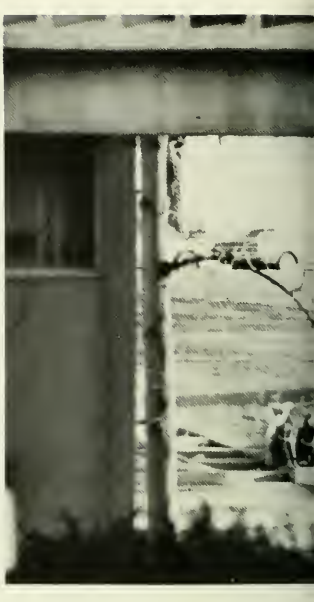
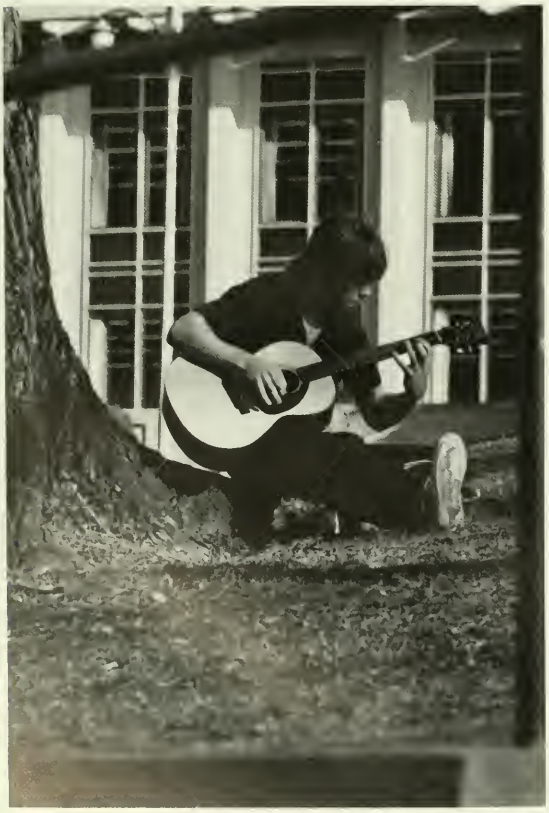
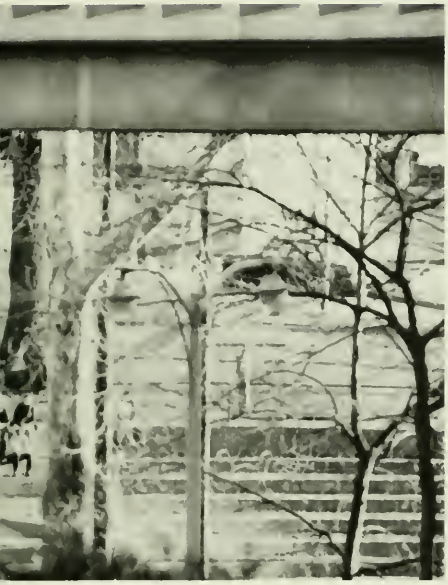
DO NOT





Since in this way man comes to resemble heaven and earth, he is not in conflict with them. His wisdom embraces all things, and his tao brings order into the whole world; therefore he does not err. He is active everywhere, but does not let himself be carried away. He rejoices in heaven and has knowledge of fate; therefore he is free of care. He is content with his cirucmstances and genuine in his kindness; therefore he can practice love—Ta Chun



Nature is vanishing. The city is vanishing. The accelerating dissolution of both ideal nature and ideal city has induced a massive compromise, an attempt to salvage elements of both. . .But both the pseudo city and the pseudo country, with commuters shuttling between them in a desperate search for satisfaction, which neither can provide, appear in the end to promote little more than discontent. The suburb's promise of country life within easy reach of the pleasures of the city has proved false.—Serge Chermayeff; Christopher Alexander/Community and Privacy

Cosmic energy is love, the affinity of being with being. It is a universal property of all life, and embraces all forms of organized matter. Thus, the tendency to unite; the attraction of atom to atom, molecule to molecule, or cell to cell. The forces of love drive the fragments of the universe to seek each other so that the world may come into being.—Teilhard de Chardin/ Phenomenon of Man

Everyday, our little movements tell the world how we feel. We say "I'm lonely, help me. I like you, talk to me. I'm upset, leave me alone." Most of these messages are unconscious and are acted out in a "body language." We wrinkle our foreheads for worry, tap our fingers for impatience, pucker our lips for displeasure. . .

. . .to communicate with someone is to effect some form of change in their store of experiences. This change may affect their level of perception, their way of seeing things, their information bank and even their pattern of behavior.

Led by seniors Bob Richmond and Carlton Marshall and juniors Ron Ferrara and Jack Haire, the American University wrestling team compiled the second winning record in the last 12 years of Eagle wrestling.

Richmond, a double gold metal winner in the 1973 Maccabiah Games, finished the regular season with a perfect 16-0 mark and captured third place in the Middle Atlantic Conference Championships.

Ferrara, a participant in the NCAA tournament in 1973, won 14 of 17 outings followed by Marshall (8-3-1) and Haire (10-4-3).

Coach Dee Frady is expecting a top flight defense but run production is the big question mark as the Eagle baseball team prepares for the 1974 spring season.

The defense is headed by pitchers Rick Fleshman, Gary Bick and Howard Hendershot along with catcher Steve McGugan. Fleshman and McGugan joined team mate Ron Riley on the All-Star team of the Metropolitan Collegiate Fall Baseball League and the former two are considered definite pro prospects after graduation this Spring. Returning lettermen Jim Cadue and John Boggs will join second baseman Riley in the infield, and Arnie Grubel appears set at one outfield spot.

I'm trying to avoid studying.

Thrilled!

Compliments of Bayers Den.

People complain about being shoved into categories: "cool, hippie freak," "fraternity guy," etc. Most feel that they are the only ones who can capture their individuality. A camera on the quad equipped with a remote control enabled people to describe themselves with photographs and words.

A Talon-ted Staff

A dwindling photography staff, an ever-present office manager (at least fall semester), a cocky Freshman (who will surely go far), an apricot french poodle that nearly drove the editors crazy, and an editor with a black irish temper almost meant the end of the Talon this year. But with the help of the tavern and a steadying editorial hand the new semester gave the yearbook a fresh start so that despite a late beginning 1974 Talon headed for a spring delivery.

THE STUDENT CONFERATION OF AMERICAN UNIVERSITY

EDITORIAL

Life at AU went on as usual. The administration faltered. ARA Slater ignored a petition signed by over 900 students to rid the campus dining services of teamster lettuce. Student government leaders worked against students' interest and even supported the administration's call for an 8% tuition increase. This was in tune with the national trend which threatened to make private schools playgrounds for the upper class. Again, many of the most popular professors were forced to leave. And, despite a slick advertising campaign, the library fund had raised less than 20% of the proposed building costs.

There were bright spots in the school year. A black woman was chosen as the vice-president of Student Life. She promptly ignored rulings of the university's court system—the most comprehensive one in the country, according to the American Bar Association's Student Division. Picketers succeeded in ousting military recruiters from campus. Gaslines went from blocks long to a short wait, although the prices went up. Streaking became the "in" thing to do and wasn't confined to drunken fraternity guys. Tavern patronage picked up too. If nothing else is worthy of note, the Talon came out in spring for the first time in four years. Seniors could reminisce over the school year while searching for letters from grad schools, summer employment, or career jobs. They could think over the fun times they'd had and escape "growing up" for a few more moments. And they could wonder if life in the "real world" is going to be as good, even if Nixon is impeached
